The PRAYER FOR TODAY FROM The Upper Room

Whether one member suffer, all the members suffer with it. (1 Corinthians 12:26.)

PRAYER: O God, we thank Thee for the world-wide fellowship of Thy church, which brings Thy healing love to us in our need. Help us who receive such love to love others as Thou dost love them in Christ's spirit we pray this prayer and the prayer He taught us, "Our Father who art in heaven Amen."

NO LONE WOLVES

WHAT does it take to be a church member in good standing, as the term goes?

The Episcopal church convention in Detroit has decided that these are the requirements:

Regular worship; other acts of devotion and charity and using "all Godly and sober conversation" on Sundays, to quote from ancient "rule book" of the church.

I reckon that other churches will agree in large measure to such requirements.

It is a common belief by millions of Americans who are unaffiliated as to church membership that any man can be a "good" Christian if he believes in the existence of God, recognizes the Divinity of Christ and "behaves" himself. That is an erroneous belief.

A "good" Christian is one who participates in denominational affairs, supports his church as liberally as he can, attends services fairly regularly and associates frequently with people of similar inclinations.

No man is a "good" Christian who also is a lone wolf.

HOW ABOUT SEAT BELTS?

THE promotion of seat belts for cars following a National Safety Council campaign for their installation is growing.

There was a lot of controversy about seat belts for a year or so. Consumers Research Bulletin, for example, did not think much of them and said so in one or two bulletins Lately, there seems to have been a cessation of arguments against installation

The lack of a seat belt in his car may have caused the death of Ray Koerber, the Nebraska City patrolman who was killed near Plattsmouth last week.

The presence of seat belts in their car saved the lives of a couple of Nebraska Citians when their car upset on the Dunbar road not long ago. Mrs Floyd Duffey and her son, Bill, are sure that without the belts which kept them dangling in the upset vehicle prevented serious accident and possible death. They credit the belts with saving them.

Many people use seat belts. I have had them in the car for years I should use them in driving around town because that's where the risk of being bumped from the rear is greatest.

Belts must be properly installed It is a "must" that they go through the floor and be attached to the car's frame Another thing: Some belts are much better than others. The prospective owner should be sure of what he is getting. Buying something because it is cheap, chum, is a mistake. It can be fatal. As to belts, talk to the dealer in whom you have confidence.

OUT OF CONTEXT

COMMENT on the death of Charles E. Wilson, cabinet member and industrialist, harped too much on a statement attributed to him on an unguarded occasion. That was when he said "What's good for General Motors is good for the country."

That phrase, played up by those who do not like business men and scoff at business except when it can be inveigled into donating to somebody's college or charity, was too redolent of an incident involving Commodore Vanderbilt who, as you will remember, once said to a reporter: "The public be damned." Most people think that is all he said. The truth is the quotation was taken out of context. If one reads the whole statement made by the pioneer railroader one will understand he was vexed beyond normal endurance at a newsman who had been badgering him and who finally blurted out, "The public won't like what you are doing, Mr. Vanderbilt." It was then that the testy old financier exploded under attack, as he had ever right to do.

Charles E. Wilson relinquished a million dollars in income to take a place in the federal government at less than $25,000 a year. He gave it up because some of our best known Do Gooders, always pestering business men to take jobs under Uncle Sam and then insulting them after they do so, insisted he divorce himself from General Motors. He did so at great cost to himself. He served the country as defense minister and did a fine job. He probably saved the taxpayers 5 billion dollars because he knew what he was doing. He should be remembered for that, not for a tattered sentence taken from a longer utterance and avidly picked up by Fringers and Welfare Staters who couldn't reconcile a bank statement if indeed they ever had an opportunity to do so.

OUR FRIEND DOUGLAS TIMMERMAN WHO visited relatives here a few days ago is manager of the one of the most active Chamber of Commerce organizations in the Middle West.

Timmerman has been at Tulsa for about four years after an 11-year term as manager of the Minneapolis chamber The Tulsa organization has a staff of 37 people, owns a building valued at $2,000,000 and has a budget of more than $325,000 a year.

THE visitor was interested in Nebraska City's river front operations, where steel was being taken out of a barge for Lincoln Steel Company.

Tulsa, within four or five years, will be the head of navigation on the Arkansas river U.S. Engineers now are busy preparing for that extension of river traffic It may be 200 miles from Tulsa to the mouth of the Arkansas, but the people of that bustling city expect to see the boats before many years.

IN A group of Nebraska Citians the other evening we were unable to find a single one who planned to rush out and make plans for a fall-out shelter

All had either heard Adjutant General Welch's somber warning at a Rotary club speech or had read the story in the paper.

Several thought the Welch remarks were part of a planned nation-wide effort to stir up support for Civil Defense

MOST of those who discussed the possibility of nuclear attack were of the opinion that when the big blast comes, if it does, fall-out shelters won't be the answer By then it will be too late

If the world is going to be laid waste by nuclear war, past mistakes already have set up the catastrophe.

ON the other hand most of us are thinking that IT never will happen! It's hard to say if this is the safe and sane attitude No one can be sure.

But of one set of facts we CAN be sure: The communists aren't going to deviate from their announced plan We had better toughen our defenses and cease appeasement A soft policy toward the reds can result in nothing except slavery for our children.
