TO ENFORCE LIMIT

PARIS (UPI) — French navy ships will enforce a three-mile limit against foreign fishing boats off the French coast, shipping sources here said Thursday.

Crewmen aboard French trawlers returning to port complained they found hundreds of Russian, English, German and Dutch boats fishing in French waters Wednesday.

Legionnaires and VFW members reportedly talked of blocking traffic on U.S. 75 and No 2 with barricades Veterans Day, but the act didn't materialize

The only apparent reason was, "we couldn't get enough men"

"Ya can't stop highway traffic," one fella exclaimed.

"Whaddya do," one Legionnaire asked, "when the law comes?"

"Well, you nut, just tell him it's Veterans Day," was the answer

Over at the hangout, the book business went out of style when "Pete" Peterson and Garry Alles agreed their wager was even when the final score Saturday was Huskers 14, Oakies (and I say that mildly) 0 The upshoot of the shebang was that Pete was the gracious beneficiary of a $10 pool because he held the right number which he forgot about during the game and was cheering for an additional score

Up on the North 40

Rightly so, I told the folks to hurry up on the hill before the first snow and they did as suggested Of course, it doesn't snow any more up on the North 40 than it does on Central . . . it just comes a little sooner . sort of an American Fijiama forecaster upper. But then, you needn't fret about snow-blocked roads 'cause John, the man with the good looking daughters, Freeman, has put up snow fence.

I've often wondered what would happen to the turkey business if "see-it-go" and "forget-the-cal.... lories" would be the main serving on Thanksgiving. It'll never happen at the Beaumont house...our family is fond of roast turkey or duck with dressing, sauerkraut and all .... excuse me, I better go get a sandwich.

Another power study shelved

LINCOLN (UPI) — The nine-member Nebraska Public Power Committee (NPPC) split temporarily this week on whether to adopt a resolution calling for the Unicameral to appropriate at least $150,000 for an unbiased study of the state's power problems

However, Frank Phelps, utilities director for Grand Island, withdrew his motion to adopt the resolution "in the interest of harmony"

The resolution asked the study to be conducted by professional engineers and that results be made known prior to the 1965 legislative session

Phelps withdrew the motion after Ray Schacht, general manager for Consumers Public Power District, said it would have the effect of nullifying the "intense and long study just completed by the Legislative Council study committee" Schacht said adoption of the resolution would be offensive to the study committee and its efforts

Single District Urged

The study committee recommended that a single district be established to govern power firms and that a power commission be established to act as a referee in power disputes. The committee's recommendations were made public Tuesday.

'Gutter politics' laid to Morrison

McCOOK (UPI)—Governor Morrison was accused Thursday of playing "cheap gutter politics" by removing three members of the State Centennial Commission

Mrs Ralph Brooks, one of those fired by Morrison, made the charge in a letter to the governor The people of Nebraska are not so naive to believe the firings were non-political, she said

Mrs Brooks, widow of the former governor, opposed Morrison in the May Democratic gubernatorial primary The governor also removed from the commission Floyd Wisner Scottsbluff publisher who opposed his re-election, and Val Peterson, former Republican governor

"This is still a free country, Governor Morrison, whether you like it or not, and under the rights each of us has from the Constitution, each of us is supposed to be able to express our opinions without fear of retribution," Mrs Brooks said

If it was improper for those who opposed Morrison to serve on the commission, she asked the governor, "what about persons who may have actively worked for your re-election?"

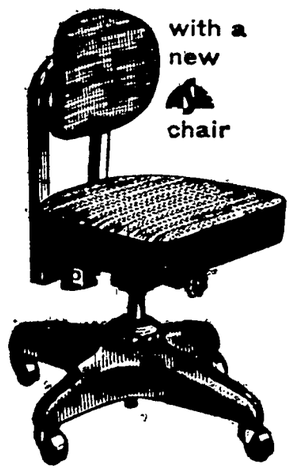

She quoted a Morrison letter asking her if she felt able to remain on the commission "in view of statements which you expressed during the past year indicating a lack of faith in the administration

"Your own words repudiate the statement you made to reporters that your request for my resignation is not politically motivated" she said
