THE CASE OF THE CHICAGO RIOT

Reversal must be asked

By TONY FULLER

CHICAGO (UPI) — Attorney William M. Kunstler says U.S. Attorney Thomas A. Foran now must ask for a reversal of convictions of five of the "Chicago Seven" because he has admitted police "got even" with antiwar youth during the 1968 Democratic national convention.

Kunstler said Friday that Foran has "completely contradicted" government evidence in the riot conspiracy trial with a speech in which Foran referred to the "seven" as "fags" and their lawyers as "mouthpieces."

Foran's comments were made Thursday night in a speech to 200 members of the Loyola Academy Boosters Club in Wilmette. In it, Foran expressed contempt for the "Seven" and their attorneys and charged they attempted to use Black Panther Bobby G. Seale—severed from the trial — "as though they were masters of the plantation."

Foran: 'Police Felt Great'

Foran—saying the nation's youth is being lost to "a freaking fag revolution" —described a bloody confrontation between police and antiwar demonstrators in front of the Conrad Hilton Hotel Aug. 28, 1968.

"For 18 minutes the police moved in and got even for what they had been taking from the demonstrators for three days. After that, the police felt great. They were smiling and waving and you could see it was a great psychological thing for them."

Kunstler, from his home in Mamaroneck, N.Y., said Foran's comments "completely contradicted" government evidence during the nearly five-month trial. He said Foran had "an obligation to both the defendants and the law" to ask a federal appeals court to reverse the convictions of five of the seven.

The seven were in Cook County Jail awaiting a ruling by the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on a petition that they be granted bail. U.S. District Court Judge Julius J. Hoffman had jailed them for contempt of court without granting bail. Five of the seven were convicted by a U.S. District Court jury of individually crossing state lines to incite a riot.

Judge Hoffman sentenced each to five years in jail with $5,000 fines plus court costs on the convictions. The contempt and conviction sentences were to run concurrently. The judge sentenced Kunstler and defense attorney Leonard I. Weinglass to contempt sentences, but stayed them until May 4 so they could handle appeals.

Foran's Personal Verdict

In his speech Thursday night, Foran referred to Abbie Hoffman as "scummy but clever"; David Dellinger as a "sneak"; Jerry Rubin as a "baby," and Kunstler and Weinglass as "mouthpieces." He had kinder words for Seale, who was severed from the trial and sentenced to four years in jail for contempt. Seale is to be tried separately on the convention charges.

"Bobby Seale had more guts and more charisma than any one of them, and he was the only one I don't think was a fag," Foran said.

"They used that kid as though they were masters of the plantation. They used him so grossly and so callously that I can't see how the news media couldn't see it."

He said the gagging and binding of Seale—who had demanded to be his own attorney—was "the most horrible sight I've ever seen in a courtroom."

Foran told the audience, "We've lost our kids to the freaking fag revolution and we've got to reach out for them."

"Our kids don't understand that we don't mean anything by it when we call people niggers," he said. "They look at us then like we're dinosaurs when we talk like that."

Dionne quint dies in her apartment

MONTREAL (UPI) — Marie Dionne Houle, 35, one of the famed Dionne quintuplets, was found dead in her apartment Friday night, leaving three of the quints still alive.

Mrs. Houle, who lived alone, may have been dead since Monday or early Tuesday, her doctor said. An autopsy was ordered.

There was no suspicion of foul play or other unnatural cause of death, according to her brother-in-law, Germain Allard, the sisters' spokesman.

Mrs. Houle separated from her husband, Florian, four years ago. Their two children, Emilie, 9, and Monique, 7, live in a convent.

Two of the surviving quints, Annette and Yvonne, live in Montreal suburbs and the third, Cecile, resides in Quebec City. The fifth sister, Emilie, died Aug. 6, 1954.

Allard, who said no funeral plans had been made pending the autopsy and a search for possible burial wishes in Mrs. Houle's will, said she would likely be buried in St. Bruno, a Montreal suburb.

Lived In Solitude

He said Mrs. Houle had lived a solitary life, but talked to Mrs. Allard at least once a day by telephone and visited her daughters twice a month.

He said his wife became worried Friday after not hearing from her sister since Monday. Mrs. Houle's doctor was called, and when he got no answer at her door he called police.

They entered through a rear window and found the body. The doctor reported that Mrs. Houle had been taking prescribed pills in correct dosages. He ruled out suicide as a possible cause of death.

5 In Family of 14

The quintuplets were part of a family of 14 children, six older and three younger.

The five tiny girls, born to Mrs. Elzire Dionne in Callander, Ont., had a total weight of just over 10 pounds a week after their birth. Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, a local general practitioner, delivered the girls and was credited with keeping them alive in the first, dangerous days.

Fears that the girls might be exploited by promoters arose when their world-wide appeal was realized. This prompted the Ontario government to pass legislation in 1935 making them wards of the province.

They were educated in their home in Callender, and attended college as a group. The five girls were not separated until they were 19, in Novemer of 1953.

The other night a group of Nebraska City industrialists and City Utilities representatives had a dinner meeting for the purpose of "talking shop" and in effect, give Utilities an idea of what it could expect of coming loads on the power systems, etc.

It was a gentle, informative, informal get-together. That is until Harold Fouts, chairman of the Board of Public Works, opened the introductions.

Mr Fouts told about his family, particularly pointing out his grandchildren, and asked each of the others present to tell about themselves.

Well, the grandfather bragging permits went all to pieces. When they finally rounded the table Jim Olsen figures 30 or 35 grandchildren had been mentioned.

But it took Les Yager to put a cap on the situation when he told about his job with Utilites and slipped in that bit about working every day at City Utilities after half a century. . . and a great grandfather.

Basketball fans dropped their jaws the other night at the freshman basketball tournament when Mike Wilberger, son of Mr and Mrs Dwight Wilberger, 1019 Thirteenth Avenue, dunked 31 points for his Junior High teammates to win 57-54.

Frosh Coach Dan Ostransky who always seems to come up with some hustling young boys and who never seems to get overexcited about anything, is looking for greater things from his 6-2 boy.

The coach said the boy is "coming into his own now."

Dick Barton, the Glenwood, Iowa, newsman who has been helping us in the ad department says the biggest show of the year is only a few weeks —the return of the geese to the Forney lake area.

Dick said it's pretty hard to get close to the flocks for a good look.

A couple of us got usually close to geese while they were feeding in a field one Saturday afternoon, but . . .shame, shame . . .we never had a camera with us to prove it.

Nebraska Citians perked up their ears when they heard comments about the historical value of the town from a visitor.

John Q. Magiee II, a representative of the State Historical Society, pointed to structures connected with the opening of the west and told planners and firemen at the meeting that a lot could be harvested for the tourist industry.

Magiee asked for more information about the town and a dozen suggestions were made on who to see.

It's a good question.

Who is the historical authority in Nebraska City?

One of the points the speaker made was the Russell, Majors and Waddell freight organization. Accordingly, the company was tremendous in the size of business it conducted and the number of employes.

Mrs Bryan Farson who owns the property now could probably quote figures from what she has read, but I had to go to the 1954 Centennial book to read that on a single day, the company shipped out 163 wagons over the Overland Trail.

Here's a note from Dr. Carroll Prouty, David City. Doctor Prouty served the Methodist church here, moving to David City a couple years ago.

He sent along a couple church bulletins detailing youth study groups in the community during Lenten season.

Don't Be Taken In!

Read These Hints Before You Buy From Any Door-To-Door Home Improvement Peddler

- Don't be hurried. Shy away from any proposal that cannot be delayed for a day. Any reputable firm will always welcome investigation.
- Do not rely on verbal promises or guarantees and don't make cash payments to strangers.
- Know what you are buying. Sometimes the contractor will make the estimate for the actual cost. Sometimes the excess material is never delivered.
- If you do contract for home improvements, know what you are signing. It's safer to have your lawyer check the fine print in the contract. BEST OF ALL, get an estimate from a local firm. . . .they'll always be there to back up their guarantees for many years.

The Season For Flying Kites Is Here Again When You Fly It Safely It Can Be A Lot Of Fun but —

KITE STRINGS AND POWER LINES DON'T MIX!

PARENTS—KIDDIES:

Just be sure that there are no electric power lines in the area where you fly your kite. The danger in flying a kite near a power line is that the electricity from the power line may get to you. If the string on your kite is wet, or if it has any material in it which will conduct electricity, the electricity from the power lines can come down the string into your hands. This could be extremely painful.

Have Fun . . . But Play It Safe—

If your kite gets away from you and gets into a power line leave it there — let the utility boys take it down. They know how and they have the equipment to protect themselves.

Have fun with your kite but let's make it safe fun.
