

Wilt, Lew may meet in playoffs

By United Press International

Wilt Chamberlain vs. Lew Alcindor in the finals of the National Basketball Association playoffs?

It's a definite possibility. Chamberlain's Los Angeles Lakers and Alcindor's Milwaukee Bucks begin division-final series this weekend that could lead to a meeting between the two giants in the NBA finals.

Milwaukee, an easy 4-1 winner over Philadelphia in its division semifinal playoff, takes the next step in its championship quest today by meeting the New York Knicks in the opener of the East Division finals. The Knicks qualified for step two in the playoffs by eliminating Baltimore in seven games.

The Lakers are at Atlanta Sunday for the opener of the best-of-seven West Division finals. The Hawks will be entering the contest with a full week's rest following their five-game triumph over Chicago while the Lakers had to go the full seven-game route before eliminating the Phoenix Suns. The Lakers, after losing three of their first four games to the Suns, became only the second team in NBA history to overcome a 3-1 deficit when they swept the final three games, including Thursday night's clincer, a 129-94 rout at Los Angeles.

The Knicks beat the Bucks in four of the six regular season games between the two teams. The first three victories were relatively easy as rookie Alcindor was learning his way around the NBA. New York won the fourth game by only one point and the Bucks showed their improvement by taking the final two games from the East DIVISION CHAMPIONS.

The Hawks beat the Lakers in four of their seven regular season meetings but Los Angeles was without the services of Chamberlain in each of those games. Big Wilt suffered a knee injury on Nov. 7 and missed nearly the entire campaign, returning only two weeks before the end of the season.

GRASS, TREE LIMB FIRE—The Nebraska City Fire Department was called to a site about three-fourths of a block west of 22nd Street and First Corso Friday evening. A grass and tree limb fire was quickly brought under control. Golfers to the north on Steinhart Park golf course had noticed some youngsters in the area and had seen smoke. The fire department was called.

Cheryl Jane Gigstad, nine-year-old daughter of Mayor-elect and Mrs A.O. Gigstad, and I had a long talk about this election thing that changed the household school and play activities of the little girl.

Cheryl is a fourth grader at Fourteenth Street school. Her teacher is Mrs Geraldine Steinbrink.

We agreed that it was an interesting campaign and that her mother and dad have a lot of friends (especially a lot of friends during the campaign).

There were also a lot of telephone calls to the house and a lot of visitors. But the night that Daddy was elected it was really busy.

Cheryl helped with the hostess chores of pouring coffee and serving cookies to the many well-wishers who came knocking at the door after the election results started coming in.

She really didn't have much of an opinion about the election or the campaign issues. She has been a pretty busy little girl trying to answer the telephone like a grownup and getting names and numbers for her paents to return the calls.

Cheryl and I have a little secret that we pulled on someone at school the other day.

You've heard of the TV show, "The Governor and J.J."

Well, now it's "The Mayor and C.J." She has a big smile to offer when she pulls that little game on friends.

Congratulations are in order to the new adminstration, Mayor Gigstad, Finance Commissioner Bill Carroll and Street commissioner Clyde Stoll, the only one of the commissionrs to be returned to office.

A thank-you for many years of service is also deserving to Mayor Robert McKissick and Finance Commissioner Ed Ransdell. I'll always remember those words from Barry Goldwater when he was asked how it felt to be beaten nearly 2-1 by Lyndon Johnson.

Mr Goldwater said he didn't feel bad at all. In fact, he said he felt pretty good knowing he had 27 million friends.

Bill Rivett, the popular Veterans of Foreign Wars commander in Nebraska City, returned from a trip to Washington, D.C., all fired up and ready to help continue building the post.

Bill was sent to Washington, D.C., as a reward for his leadership in VFW membership and other activities.

The post will meet Tuesday night at the home for the annual election. Installation will be May 12. VFW members are planning participation in the Arbor Day again this year, plus the tree planting program. Several trees will be dedicated April 19 in a special ceremony with the National Guard participating.

The Iowa bottoms are the feeding grounds for thousands of geese, according to a report from Mrs James Booker, News-Press Riverton correspondent.

There are times, Up on the North 40, when it sounds like the night-flying geese are going to make a landing on our roof.

I took a friend over to the Forney lake area a few years ago to see the geese. He had never seen such a sight. Guess we sort of take things for granted too often. It is nice to hear remarks from someone who appreciates something like that.

Bill Norris, a partner with his brother, Earl, in the Midland Auto Crusher company, said his company has already looked into a solution to a problem created along with the devouring of junked cars — air pollution and it's costly.

The companies that buy the metal don't want any rubber, cloth or plastic. And as a result, Midland is required to burn out the junked cars before crushing and shipping them to the steel shredding companies.

It's ironical that a junked car cleanup campaign should add to air pollution, but at the moment, that's the way the cookie crumbles.

Norris would much prefer someone else "turn" the car bodies. For one thing, that's a dangerous job. He says the drive trains on some models will explode like a hand grenade. He escaped one such incident and has been careful not to be caught in a similar situation.

Joy Thornhill, the City building inspector, has "jailed" a parakeet at his office at City Hall. The bird was found on the street.

Joy says he will keep it at the station, hopeful that someone will claim it.

Meantime, the bird is in good hands and is receiving good care.

There's a sign on the cage which reads:

"40 cents due on jar of feed."

Parker still out on bond

LINCOLN (UPI) — Federal District Judge Robert Van Pelt rejected Friday the state's request to revoke the appeal bond for Darrel F. Parker, who was released from the Nebraska Penitentiary last December after serving 13 years of a life sentence for the murder of his wife.

Van Pelt had released Parker, 37, on $5,000 bond while appeals are heard in the courts. Parker has been living with his parents at Henderson, Iowa, since December.

The former Lincoln city forester was convicted of the strangulation death of his wife, Nancy, in 1955.

The U.S. Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals last summer set aside the conviction on the grounds a confession had been coerced from him. The U.S. Supreme Court overruled the decision and said the issue should be settled by a state court.

The state's request had followed the issuance of an order last month by Van Pelt giving the Lancaster County District Court until May 28 to conduct the hearing on the confession.

If the confession is found valid Parker's conviction will be upheld. If the statement is struck down authorities will decide whether to retry him or let him go free.

STOKES' WILL

CINCINNATI (UPI)—The estate of Maurice Stokes, former basketball star for the Cincinnati Royals who died last week, has been left to his alma mater, St. Francis College of Loretto, Pa. . . .

Modern garden hoses will last for many years if given a reasonable amount of care. However, if abused, even the best quality of garden hose will have its life shortened so that complete replacement soon becomes necessary. To keep a hose from cracking prematurely, never kink or bend it sharply when in use or when storing it. Attach a swivel-type connector or angle fitting to the hose spigot if you frequently pull the hose off at a sharp angle from the faucet. This will minimize the danger of creating a permanent crease just below the fitting where the hose screws on the spigot. When winter comes, drain all water from your hose and store it indoors in neat coils.
